Staying on the Path

COSUMNES RIVER COLLEGE GUIDED PATHWAYS STEERING COMMITTEE PRESENTATION 12-04-17
What are Guided Pathways?

Guided pathways reform is a student-centered approach that can dramatically increase the number of students earning community college credentials, while closing equity gaps.

Guided pathways provide students with clear, educationally coherent program maps that include specific course sequences, progress milestones, and program learning outcomes.

Four Pillars to Guided Pathways

Clarifying the Path – Create clear curricular pathways to employment and further education

Entering the Path – Help students choose and enter their pathway

Staying on the Path – Help students stay on their path

Learning on the Path – Ensure that learning is happening with intentional outcomes.

Paraprofessionals

Paraprofessionals, also referred to as counseling assistants and information technicians, are comparable to instructional assistants within the classrooms (ASCCC, 1994). Individuals hired within paraprofessional positions range from bachelor’s degree recipients to community college students. Discrepancies found within paraprofessional hiring practices reinforce the importance of identifying the primary role of the paraprofessional within California community college counseling departments.

Assisting at registration by providing information and referring students to campus offices and services: This information might include important dates and deadlines or how to read a class schedule. Paraprofessionals can also assist students in scheduling classes once the course list or student educational plan has been developed by counseling faculty.

Providing information about program requirements: Many counseling departments prepare materials about college programs to help students plan their schedules. Paraprofessionals could disseminate this information.

Facilitating and supporting activities: There are many useful activities that paraprofessionals could provide in Transfer Centers, Career Centers, Assessment Centers, Disabled Student Programs, and Extended Opportunity Programs. They might assist students in using reference materials or computerized career information systems. Paraprofessionals can coordinate university tours or visits by university representatives. They may also design and organize advertising for center activities or make classroom presentations to students about the services of various campus offices and programs. In addition, they might provide placement test results, as long as their interpretation is left to faculty. Additional responsibilities could include assisting with community outreach, such as high school visits and outreach (pp. 8 – 9).

Faculty Advisors (Coaches)

Faculty advisors should have the minimum qualifications to teach in the subject area in which they provide advising and should exhibit the following competencies:

- ability to interact non-judgmentally with students using effective helping skills
- interest in serving as an advisor (no one should be assigned advising responsibilities automatically).

Activities within the scope of faculty advisors are the following:
(1) Providing information regarding programs, career opportunities, and course selection in their disciplines.
(2) Referring students to appropriate services. The faculty advisor can provide a link for the student with other essential services: counseling, financial aid, career center, veteran’s resource center, services for students with disabilities, tutoring center, health center, etc. Faculty advisor training must include learning to recognize when referrals back to counseling are necessary.
(3) Coordinating with counseling departments: non-counseling faculty are excellent resources for discipline-related information; counseling faculty can provide comprehensive training on skills and strategies.
